

Shiloh Indian Mounds Site (NPS)

East of Hurley in Shiloh National Military Park

Located in Shiloh National Military Park, the site is the largest extant fortified Mississippian ceremonial mound complex in the Tennessee River valley and is important as a source for testing the chronology of other sites in the region. The site consists of six Late Mississippian temple mounds, one Late Woodland burial mound and an associated village site, and a low earth embankment that once served as a foundation for a wooden palisade.
